Renusol facilitates the development of PV systems with its new website

In keeping with the company philosophy „Simple. Solid. Service.“ the German manufacturer of PV mounting systems relaunches an optimised website which simplifies the planning of PV systems. The new website layout, enhances Renusol’s service, support and planning of PV systems, for which Renusol is renowned for, to an innovative and digital level. In addition to a new, fresh look, the website therefore provides an extensive, improved overview of the wide range of products and is now additionally online in a Spanish and a Dutch version.

Innovations at a glance:

Simple: Now, the new website provides a practical breakdown of the individual mounting systems by types of roof and types of roof covering. The customers simply select a suitable and matching category to display all compatible systems. For ease of use, the individual products have been worked out and are displayed in a practical way so that you can see how the system fits together and visually works.

Solid: The user can access the online design software PV Configurator 3.0 from the home page and can also at a click of a button access all relevant data sheets and installation manuals from the top menu bar. Furthermore, reference projects for all products are shown and additionally classified for better convenience.

Service:

Renusol provides a call-back request service and direct contact details to our employees for project inquiries and technical advice. In addition customers can also find the Renusol specialist for their specific countries via a new menu directly on the home page.

Customer benefit is the focus

The new website provides Renusol customers with a clear and simple solution to PV planning.

With this, Renusol hopes to be able to carry on and upgrade its continuous successful trend of proven and innovative product lines.
